

Emanuel Albaladejo, working at the Jury's Inn in Watford:

"I work all day, standing behind the counter, checking customers in and out. For example, I have to charge their credit cards for the rooms. The other co-workers have integrated me and trust me completely so I am allowed to do all the tasks that have to be done in a hotel, from banking, allocations, receiving calls and helping guests with their luggage. The guests are very friendly and my supervisors are amazing people. I am glad that I have the opportunity to experience ,the London way of work'.
