

Alena Maß, working at Concept Care Solutions, a leading health care provider in the UK:

"After a mini tour around the office, I was assigned to work with the team from the London Cactus College. To my surprise they mostly talked Romanian with each other. Later, I figured out that the next students coming in are all immigrants from Romania. Gladly, when giving me tasks, as well as in between, everybody talked English to me. While Gabi always send me on missions to print, scan or register students, Andrei was the person I communicated with the most.

It didn't take long until I knew he not only speaks English and Romanian, but has also lived in Sweden for 15 years and knows German and French. Thankfully, during the day my tasks kept getting just a little bit more complicated each time. I got to enjoy scanning together with a disabled colleague at CCS, who was very happy every time I turned up with a new stack of paper."
