

Vanessa Sauer at her desk at "Century 21", a real estate agency in London:

"Today my first task at work was searching house numbers on google maps which was very interesting and also a bit of fun. After my break I had to save contacts in the computer and at 4 pm my supervisor showed me a one-room flat. It was cool to see what a flat looks like in London, but it was so small and so expensive.

Wednesday was a very relaxed working day. In the morning I was able to use the time to write my reports and for half an hour I even had to manage the office alone. It was a challenge for me but everything worked out well and I was very happy that they trusted me to manage on my own.

When Devinne and I got home late in the evening, we accidentally set off the house alarm because the host mother's brother didn't know that we weren't at home. The alarm woke everyone up including the neighbors, but our host mother was very calm about it."

