

Lara Schirber who is working for the "Big Choic Group" in London, an organisation in the field of education:

"Although it is already the 13th day in London, I am still not used to the Tube and bus system. I have stopped counting how many times I've already been on the wrong bus or ridden in the wrong direction on the Tube. Anyway, I have decided to always ask the bus driver first from now on.

I'm also really excited about working next week because I want to see what tasks I will get and what different kinds of departments I will become more familiar with."
